Let's be honest. If someone told me a few years ago that I could make money from WhatsApp, I would have laughed in their face like those Naija comedians cracking jokes about being a billionaire on Naira notes alone. But here we are in 2024, and people are cashing out on WhatsApp faster than some politicians count election results. Yes, my people, it's real! You can make money from WhatsApp – and I'm here to spill the beans. And not just that – I'll also show you 11 free online marketing sites in Nigeria that can help you maximize your hustle. Let me add some ginger to it with the magic of 7hubent Tech.

But before we get into the nitty-gritty, let me gist you about how my own journey started. It was one fine Saturday afternoon in Lagos. Power had just been restored after two days of blackout (Nigerians will understand), and my phone was buzzing with WhatsApp messages like a market on a Monday morning. One of those messages changed my life. A friend sent me a link to this WhatsApp TV called 7hubent Media TV, with the caption, "If you want to grow your small business for free, check this out." Normally, I ignore those types of messages because, abeg, who has time? But something inside me—call it the Holy Spirit, maybe—told me to click that link.

Long story short, I started using 7hubent Tech, and before I knew it, my business grew wings. No jokes!

Now, my aim is to help you discover how you too can make that paper using WhatsApp and these top 11 free online marketing sites in Nigeria.

1. 7hubent Tech: The Holy Grail of Free Advertising in Nigeria

I'll say it upfront—there's no better place than 7hubent Tech for getting your business out there, especially if you're on a budget. It's like when you find that one tailor who always sews your clothes perfectly, no wahala. Whether you run a small business, sell clothes, food, or offer any service, 7hubent Tech's WhatsApp groups provide the best free exposure. I've seen with my own eyes how small vendors grew into household names just by promoting their products on 7hubent.

You just need to post your ad or services, and boom, you're on your way to getting tons of customers. And you don't have to pay a dime. It's all about connection, and trust me, this one works like juju. I had a neighbor who sells homemade chin chin, and once she posted it on 7hubent, her orders doubled in just one week. By the end of the month, she was supplying snacks to two major supermarkets in Lagos.

2. Jiji.ng

You've probably heard of Jiji.ng, that online marketplace where you can buy anything from tokunbo phones to fairly used cars. But did you know it's also an excellent platform for advertising your services? Whether you're a caterer, hairdresser, or tech expert, Jiji lets you post your services for free and connect with potential clients. No, you don't need a Ph.D. in marketing—just upload a decent photo, write a good description, and you're good to go.

3. Nairaland

Ah, Nairaland! It's like the grandfather of Nigerian forums. But don't sleep on it, because even though it looks old school, Nairaland is one of the best places to advertise for free. With various sections like business, real estate, and technology, you can post about your services and products where it will get maximum visibility. I once posted about my freelance writing services on Nairaland, and I kid you not, within a week, I had five new clients.

4. OList

OList is another platform you don't want to ignore. It's a lot like Jiji, but with a fresher feel. The best part is that you can post your ads for free and even get additional promotional features if you're willing to pay a small fee. I know a guy who sells gadgets, and ever since he started posting on OList, his sales have tripled. Free or paid, it's worth a shot.

5. Facebook Marketplace

Ah, Facebook! The social media site that turned uncles and aunties into meme lords. But beyond the drama and the endless birthday notifications, Facebook Marketplace is a goldmine for free advertising. You can post just about anything—from shoes to professional services—and reach thousands of potential customers instantly. Pair it with WhatsApp, and you're practically unstoppable.

6. Craigslist

Don't sleep on Craigslist, oh! Some people think it's outdated, but the truth is, Craigslist still has a lot of loyal users, even in Nigeria. You can post ads for free, and since it's internationally recognized, it gives you an opportunity to attract clients from all over the world. Plus, there are people abroad who want to do business with Nigerian entrepreneurs. Na dem dey rush us!

7. LinkedIn

If you're in the professional space, LinkedIn is the go-to platform for free advertising. Whether you're a consultant, writer, or graphic designer, you can easily connect with clients looking for experts in your field. Don't just post your CV there—use LinkedIn to market your skills and services, and watch the connections roll in.

8. Google My Business

If you want to put your business on the map (literally), then Google My Business is your friend. It's free to use, and by simply registering your business on Google, people can find you easily when they search online. It's like standing out in the local market with a megaphone while everyone else is whispering. Best part? It's completely free.

9. Twitter

Listen, Twitter is not just for following Big Brother Naija trends or dragging politicians. It's also a great platform for promoting your business. With the right hashtag and a little bit of humor (because, let's face it, Naija Twitter loves to laugh), you can attract the attention of potential customers. Many businesses have gone viral just by tweeting their services.

10. Instagram

Instagram isn't just for influencers showing off their designer clothes. It's a great free platform to showcase your products and services. A well-curated Instagram page can do wonders for your business. I've personally seen people go from zero to hero in a matter of months just by using Instagram effectively.

11. WhatsApp TV

And now, let me circle back to where we started: WhatsApp TV. If you're wondering, "How can I get paid on WhatsApp?" The answer is simple: use WhatsApp TV channels like 7hubent Media TV. They allow you to post your business, connect with customers, and build relationships. The more people see your posts, the more likely they are to buy. Before you know it, you'll be getting daily orders and making that money.
