2. Blogging – Lagos Talk No Be Free!

If you know how to talk (and if you live in Lagos, you must sabi talk), then blogging na your calling. All those your “Lagos gist” you dey give your friends for free, start putting it on a blog. Nigerians love to read juicy news, relationship tips, and of course, anything about making money. It's easy to start a blog these days, and if your content is as hot as Nigerian Jollof, you go attract traffic, which leads to money through Google AdSense, sponsored posts, and affiliate links.

One guy I know, let's call him Tunde, started blogging with zero experience. His first article was about "Surviving Lagos Traffic Without Losing Your Mind," and the thing went viral! Today, he's using 7hubent Tech to push his blog posts in WhatsApp groups for more readers. His monthly income now fits well for his lifestyle, no more "Oga, I go pay you by month end."

3. YouTube Channel – Lights, Camera, Action!

For Lagosians that no shy and sabi talk well, YouTube can be a gold mine. Look, if people can sit down and watch videos of people eating food (na mukbang dem dey call am), then imagine how many people will watch you if you create solid content. From comedy skits to how-to videos, YouTube go pay you well once your channel gets traction. Plus, YouTube na long-term investment. The more views, the more money!

If you want to blow, promote your channel on 7hubent Tech's WhatsApp groups for free. Trust me, once Lagosians begin to enjoy your content, you go dey see alert steady.

4. Freelancing – Skills No Dey Waste for Lagos

If you get skills like writing, graphic design, coding, or even social media management, freelancing go fit you. Companies abroad dey find Nigerians wey sabi work sharp-sharp but for a reasonable fee. Websites like Fiverr, Upwork, and Freelancer will connect you to clients all over the world.

You fit even start small and build your profile gradually. One of my friends, Tosin, started as a freelance graphic designer. At first, e no too sweet, but she started advertising herself on 7hubent Tech's WhatsApp groups, and clients began rushing her like Gala for traffic! Now she doesn't even step out of her house to hustle.

5. Dropshipping – Business Without Inventory

If the idea of owning a physical store in Yaba Market sounds stressful, try dropshipping. In this business model, you sell products without keeping stock. All you need is a good supplier and a platform to showcase your products. When people order from you, you order from your supplier who ships directly to your customer.

Lagosians are naturally enterprising, and this business model fits our sharp sense of “buy and sell.” Use 7hubent Tech to advertise your products for free, and start counting profits without ever handling physical stock.

6. Online Tutoring – Teach Wetin You Know

Have you been told that you sabi explain things well? Or maybe you’re good at subjects like Mathematics, English, or even coding? Oya, it’s time to cash in on those skills. Online tutoring platforms like Preply and Chegg are ready to pay you for teaching students all over the world. And in Lagos, private tutoring is also a big thing, especially with our wahala-filled education system.

If you want your tutoring business to gain clients fast, 7hubent Tech’s WhatsApp groups are the perfect place to promote your services. People are always looking for someone to help their kids pass JAMB or WAEC.

7. Social Media Management – Being Online No Dey Waste

Let's be honest, Lagosians no dey commot for social media. We dey browse anyhow for Instagram, Twitter, TikTok, and Facebook. But do you know that being online can make you money? Companies in Lagos are looking for social media managers to run their accounts. And guess what? They'll pay you for doing what you love.

Take charge of a brand's social media, increase their followers, post content, and you go dey collect monthly salary from the comfort of your house. You can also use 7hubent Tech's WhatsApp groups to connect with business owners looking for social media managers. It's a win-win situation!

8. Sell E-books – Write, Publish, and Cash Out

If you have knowledge about any topic—whether it's how to cook Banga soup, how to succeed in a Lagos interview, or even how to survive in Third Mainland Bridge traffic—write it down and sell it as an e-book. Nigerians are always searching for information, and if your e-book is informative, people will buy it.

The best part is that once you publish an e-book, it can generate income for you for years. Just promote it for free on 7hubent Tech's WhatsApp groups and watch people start buying.

9. Create an Online Course – Turn Knowledge to Wealth

Lagosians no dey carry last when it comes to seeking opportunities. And as we all know, education is key, especially for people looking to upgrade their skills. If you are skilled in something like digital marketing, photography, or even coding, turn that knowledge into an online course. People will pay to learn from you.

Just like that, you're earning from your expertise while impacting lives. Use 7hubent Tech to spread the word about your online course, and you'll see students rushing in like say na Black Friday.

10. WhatsApp TV – Make Money from Status Views

This one na special gist I go give you. People no know say WhatsApp TV fit give you steady income if you get plenty viewers. All you need to do is build your audience by posting interesting content consistently. Once your viewers grow, businesses will start paying you to advertise on your status. It's like running a mini TV station on WhatsApp, but this one no get overhead costs.
