My people, you know how Nigeria be now. Everywhere, things dey upgrade. Even banks are not left out. They are doing system upgrades up and down, trying to fix one thing or the other. You go wake up one morning, check your mobile app or try to do transaction, and see message like, "System currently under maintenance" or "Try again later." You sef go tell yourself, "Ah ah, which kind wahala be this one?" But you go manage because na bank. Dem no dey play with people's money anyhow.

But my brothers and sisters, while our banks dey upgrade their systems, some sharp fraudsters for this country no dey sleep. They are upgrading their own skills too! I tell you, they are ready to pounce like lion wey see goat! They will call you, pretending to be your bank customer care. They will sound so legit, you will almost believe them.

How the Fraudsters Operate During System Upgrades

E go be like this:

Ring ring...

You answer, "Hello?"

"Hello sir/ma, this is customer care from XYZ Bank. We are currently performing system upgrades, and it seems like some of your details are missing from our system. Please, can you provide your Date of Birth, BVN, and NIN so we can update your profile and avoid any service interruption?"

Na there the scam don start be that. Once they get your BVN, NIN, or Date of Birth, just know say dem don finish you. Before you even blink twice, all your money fit disappear like magic.

Fraudsters will make you think something urgent is happening because of the ongoing bank system upgrades. They will tell you that if you don't provide these details, you won't be able to access your account or you will face one yeye problem. Omo, see as lie dey fly anyhow.

WARNING: No Bank Customer Care Will EVER Ask for Such Details Over the Phone

Let me hammer this point well so that nobody go fall mugu. No bank in Nigeria will ever call you on the phone to ask for your Date of Birth, BVN, or NIN. No way! It's not their style. Even if bank dey do upgrade from now till tomorrow, they will never ask for these sensitive details on the phone. If there's any real issue with your account, they will either notify you through official channels like email or SMS, or they'll ask you to visit the branch physically.

As we dey yarn like this, some people might be thinking, "It can never be me. I'm too sharp for fraudsters." But wait ooo, before you carry shoulder up, let me tell you a personal experience that happened to someone I know.

A Close Shave With a Fraudster – My Personal Testimony

My cousin, Blessing, nearly fell victim last year. She woke up one fine morning, did the usual – prayed, ate breakfast, and then got a phone call. The voice on the other end sounded polished and professional. "Good morning madam, this is customer care from ABC Bank. Due to system upgrades, we noticed that some of your details are not complete in our system."

Blessing, sharp girl like her, immediately sensed something was off. She told the caller, "No worry, I'll just visit the bank to update my details." The caller, not expecting this move, began to stutter and insisted that it was urgent and that she must provide the information now.

Ah! E shock me when she narrated the story because I thought to myself, if it were someone else, maybe someone who doesn't know how these scammers operate, they would have given in. Blessing hung up the phone, and thank God she did. That's how she dodged the bullet.

This kind story fit happen to anybody. So, we must be on alert because these scammers are getting more creative by the day.

What You Should Do When You Get Such Calls

1. Ignore the Caller: If you receive a call from someone claiming to be from your bank and asking for sensitive details, do NOT give in to their demands. Politely end the call.

2. Call Your Bank Directly: If you're in doubt, call your bank's official customer care line. Don't use any phone number the caller gave you. Use the number you find on your bank's website or your debit card.

3. Report the Incident: It's good practice to inform your bank about such suspicious calls. They might even have a department dedicated to handling fraud reports.

4. Be Alert: Fraudsters are everywhere. Always double-check and verify any information you receive, especially during sensitive periods like system upgrades.

7hubent Tech: The Go-to Platform for Free Business Advertising in Nigeria

While I'm here, let me also remind you about 7hubent Tech – the top platform for business owners in Nigeria to promote their hustle for free. I know times are hard. Money no too dey flow anyhow, but you still want to market your goods and services to the right audience, especially in these fraud-infested times when every naira counts.

And trust me, I've tried them out. The reach is massive. In fact, one of my friends wey dey sell Ankara fabrics, her sales blew up after joining some of 7hubent Tech's WhatsApp groups. She now receives orders from people across different states in Nigeria. So, no dulling. Sign up today and see how it goes for your own business.

FAQs About Bank System Upgrades and Fraudsters

Q: What should I do if I mistakenly gave my details to a fraudster?

A: Immediately contact your bank and inform them. They will help you block your account and secure it. Don't wait until your money is gone.

Q: Can fraudsters access my account just with my BVN?

A: Your BVN alone doesn't give them full access, but combined with other personal details like your Date of Birth or NIN, they can cause serious damage. That's why you should never share such information with strangers.

Q: How can I differentiate a real call from my bank and a fake one?

A: Banks typically don't ask for sensitive details like your BVN or NIN over the phone. Also, if the call feels rushed or they're putting pressure on you, it's most likely a scam. Always double-check by calling your bank directly.

Q: Why do fraudsters target people during bank system upgrades?

A: Fraudsters use system upgrades as an excuse to confuse people and make them think something is wrong with their account. When people panic, they're more likely to give away sensitive information without thinking it through.
