Ah, Bolt! The darling of Nigerian transportation. If you're living in Lagos, Abuja, or any of our major cities, you've seen them—those sleek cars with that unmistakable Bolt sticker. You've hailed them, sat in the backseat, and wondered, "What's the life of these drivers really like? Could I become one too?"

Well, dear reader, today I'll break it all down for you. Yes, YOU can become a Bolt driver, but abeg, come closer. Don't go and think it's all 'chop life, no stress' o! There's some hustle involved, but we'll talk about that. In this deep dive, I'll walk you through the steps and, trust me, with 7hubent Tech in your corner (I'll explain how in a minute), your business will go gbam like suya on a hot grill.

Why Becoming a Bolt Driver Matters in Nigeria

First things first, let's ask ourselves, why would anyone want to become a Bolt driver in Nigeria? Ah, my friend, it's simple: money must be made! Whether naija economy wan collapse or not, transportation no dey ever go out of fashion. You think say people no go waka? Everybody go waka! And with all the 'wahala' with buses, long queues, and motorbike bans, Bolt has become a lifesaver.

Driving Bolt in Nigeria is one of the easiest ways to be your own boss, make money on your own terms, and hustle like a Lagos street vendor that never sleeps. I'm telling you, as long as there's fuel in your car and internet on your phone, you are on your way to turning that key into pure cash.

But hold up! I know you've heard stories. Yes, the work no be beans o. You will face Lagos traffic. You will meet all kinds of passengers, from the cool 'bros' to the peppery 'aunties' wey no dey hear 'abeg.' But if you are determined, there's money to be made. Let's get into the details, in case you gree follow me waka.

How to Become a Bolt Driver in Nigeria: Step-by-Step Guide

1. Get the Requirements Right

My people, you no fit just wake up, carry your Toyota Camry, and say you wan start driving Bolt. You need to meet certain requirements, and this is where some folks slack. Bolt go ask you for the following:

- A valid driver's license: No license? Forget it. Naija authorities no dey joke with this one.
- Vehicle insurance: We all know Nigerian roads can be, how do we put it? Special 😊. Insurance go cover you for any 'gbese' wey fit land for your head.
- A roadworthy vehicle: Please, this one no be your uncle's 2001 jalopy o! Bolt prefers cars from 2004 and above. And don't go and try managing anyhow 'tokunbo' car wey go spoil after one month.
- Clean car with working AC: You know how Naija sun dey hot, especially in Lagos. Nobody wan enter motor wey be like microwave. Your AC must dey work well well.

2. Sign Up on the Bolt Platform

You see, this part be like as if you wan join a secret society—don't fear, it's easy. Just go to Bolt's website or download the app, and hit the 'sign up' button. Fill in your details like say you dey fill job application form, upload your documents, and wait for verification.

Verification fit take small time because Bolt go check your documents and run small background check to make sure say you no get any kelebe wahala (i.e., criminal issues). When you pass this stage, you are almost there.

3. Attend Bolt's Training or Onboarding

Before you start carrying passengers, Bolt will run you through a small orientation on how to use their app and operate well. They will also tell you some 'tatafo' passengers to watch out for (Yes, some people go enter your car, wan use you shine for social media drama).

4. Get on the Road and Hustle

Omo, once you complete the onboarding, it's time to hit the road. But wait! You think say na just start motor, begin cash out? Hold up, there's more.

If you want to maximize your earnings, you need to hustle smart, not just hard. Work during peak periods (mornings and evenings), target areas wey ‘rich bros’ dey. Don’t waste time cruising in low-traffic zones. And remember, stay professional no matter how much that passenger dey vex you.

My Personal Bolt Journey (A Small Gist for You)

Now, let me share small story. There was a time I too wanted to become a Bolt driver. Na recession period, things were tight. My brother just talk say, “Guy, forget all these ‘big man’ talk. Start driving Bolt.”

Ah, initially I no wan gree. I felt like, me, graduate, dey drive Bolt? But my people, pride no dey pay rent. I signed up and after my first week, I for no lie—it wasn’t as rosy as I thought. I faced Lagos traffic, dealt with rude passengers, and even had one auntie refuse to pay because she claimed she forgot her wallet. Chai!

But I learned fast. I started focusing on areas wey fit pay me better. I joined WhatsApp groups (ah, now I know you see why I dey talk about 7hubent Tech). These groups connected me with other Bolt drivers who shared tips on how to survive this Bolt hustle. We helped each other. That's when I realized, e no go better for person wey dey try hustle alone for this Nigeria!
