The Story Behind Joe Mettle & Dunsin Oyekan – Hallelujah

You see, there's a reason Joe Mettle and Dunsin Oyekan are not your ordinary gospel musicians. These two are ministers, not just singers. Joe Mettle, from Ghana, is known for his powerful, spirit-lifting songs that have won hearts and awards across the globe. Dunsin Oyekan is no stranger to us in Nigeria either—his songs are almost always on repeat in our homes, churches, and even at events. When I heard they teamed up for Hallelujah, I just knew something special was coming.

The first time I heard Hallelujah play on the radio, it felt like my spirit woke up. That chorus, “Hallelujah, hallelujah, hallelujah praise the Lord” repeated in my mind for days! I even caught myself humming it in the kitchen, on the bus, and during a meeting. Something about the simplicity of the lyrics, mixed with their powerful voices, makes this song hit differently.

In fact, it reminds me of one testimony I had earlier this year. I was feeling stuck—you know that kind of situation where everything seems dry? No money, no direction, just vibes and surviving. Then one Sunday, while I was worshipping with this very song, the words started to sink in. It wasn't immediate, but I found myself praying, "Come Lord, come and deliver your people." Lo and behold, by Monday, I received an unexpected call for a job I didn't even apply for! So you see, when I say this song carries fire, I'm not exaggerating. It's the kind of song that moves mountains—not just in your life, but in your spirit.
